LOGOS

The x-height equals the actual height of the red oval. The clear space is 0.5 (half) x-height all around the logo.

What's in our logo?

You've probably come across our brand logo before. It's iconic and easily recognizable and associated with great deals and even better customer service. Since this logo has been around for more than half a century, we strive to represent this logo in the best way possible.

The primary logo features the red (PMS 485) oval and AAA surrounded by the blue (PMS 287) network ring along with "Life Insurance Company."

The reversed white logo is OK to use anytime the color version is having a bad day, meaning anytime it doesn't look its best in a particular comp that's beyond our control. It's up to us to use our best judgment. The number one rule is: It has to be visible and legible. It's pretty straight forward, actually. No trickery — just a visible brand logo that's synonymous with excellence.

What not to do with the AAA Life logos:
Don't stretch, alter, disassemble, recolor, or place the logo in places where contrast is poor. Keep the AAA Logo in its authentic, original form.

Blue is the main and primary color of AAA Life.

Red is the primary accent color. Use it to highlight something important or to make the design a little more interesting.

Dark gray is our standard font color. The light gray we use in things like email components. Our component backing colors are usually white, light gray, and blue.

Antique bronze is our alternate accent color, used rarely, but can be included to add some extra warmth to things like charts and graphs.

Official colors are modified slightly to be ADA compliant in email and website platforms. This difference is clarified in the next section.

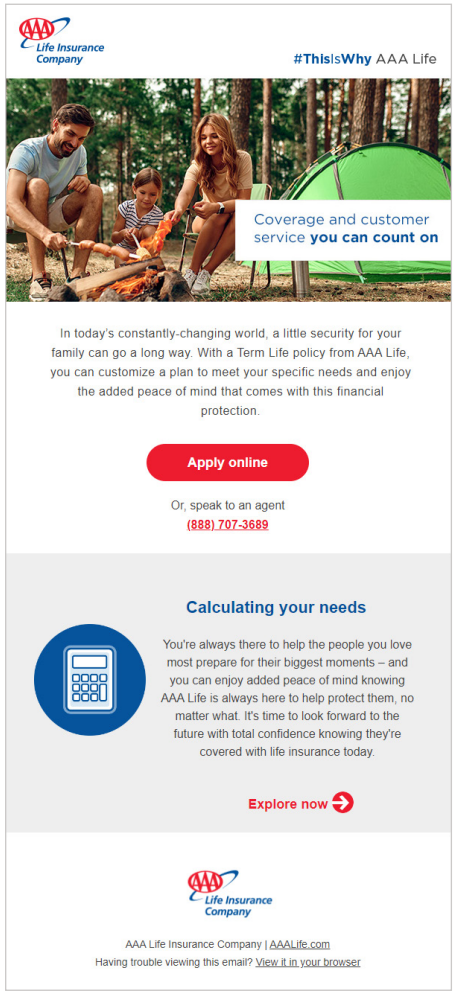

How much of each color can I use?

Try to keep the overall feel light and cool - lots of white or light gray, some blue and limited red.

Can the accent colors red and bronze be the primary color in a layout?

No.

Some important adjustments to the official colors

The color codes for email and web design are slightly different than the official AAA Life brand colors. This is to remain ADA compliant.

Headlines are usually in dark blue, #06549C.

Button backgrounds as well as some clickable links are commonly colored #E31E2E.

A light gray background should be set to #EEEEEE

General body text is set to a dark gray, #424242.

The lightest color gray text allowable on a white background that is ADA compliant is, #767676.

What fonts can I use?

Sometimes we have to ask our text to do all the heavy lifting for a piece of creative, which is no problem when you have a super font like Gotham in your corner. This typeface has emerged from the shadows and is used in nearly all of our creative. This font family has an array of weights in its tool belt — but the best ones to use are “Book” and “Bold.”

The only exception we’ll make is rocking with Open Sans (or Arial) whenever Gotham can’t make an appearance — as in certain web applications. Also, never pair these fonts together. It’s best to have them go it alone.

Then we also have Satisfy in our toolkit to throw an expressive punch into a design just when you need it. Use this one sparingly though -- its strength comes from its very limited use.

Remember, with a great typeface comes great responsibility, so just use your best judgment.

PHOTOGRAPHY: BEST PRACTICES

Life's moments aren't always big — but they're beautiful and vibrant. Those moments also serve as the essence of our photography. We also strive to make sure everyone is represented, from families to couples to kids.

Here's just a little taste of what we do — and you'll find more examples of our photography style sprinkled throughout the guide. What should and should not be in any images?

Our photography is family friendly: the kind of photos that might be in a treasured family scrapbook or a photo album, but the feel should be candid.

Images should be people-focused and warm in tone, emphasizing family, affection and activities that capture a slice of life. The setting can be at home or outdoors with confidence and optimism.

Do not include images with alcohol, cigarettes and drugs, or risky and irresponsible behavior.

And remember, for images with vehicles make sure the occupants have their seat belts on!

PHOTOGRAPHY+GRAPHICS COMBINATIONS

Outer Stroke, 2-3px

Tabs

Color fill, 85% opacity

The breaking of the frame is a subtle visual we use to stylize an image. The head of the subject is usually the first thing that breaks the frame, but sometimes it can be a hand, foot or even an object.

For this effect, you may choose 1–3 spots to interrupt the stroke, allowing various parts of the subject to break through.

Other examples of adding an artistic touch to imagery can include photos with color fills and or colored tabs with text.

The tab is a strong visual element we use often to emphasize our core message. The tab can sit behind the subject(s) but does not proceed fully across the frame. Primarily used in blue, the tab can also be used in white with words colored in AAA Life Blue.

VIDEOGRAPHY + ANIMATION

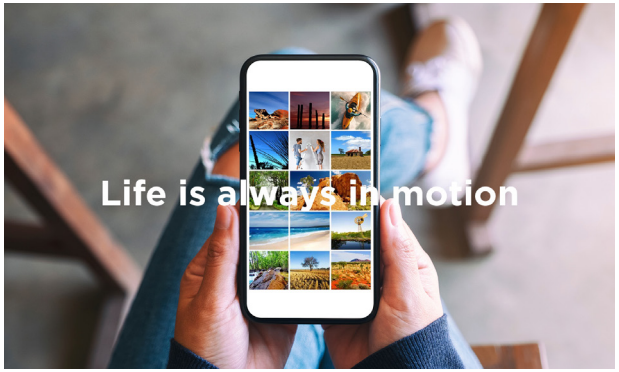

Wherever you take your next video or reels project, make sure to have some branding sprinkled throughout. Do not dismantle the AAA Life logo.

AAA Life has a vast library of custom icon art. Icons should be used to help quickly visualize different sections of content or to help illustrate an idea where a photo may not be ideal.

As robust as our library of icon art is, sometimes new icons are needed so follow these general rules when creating something new.

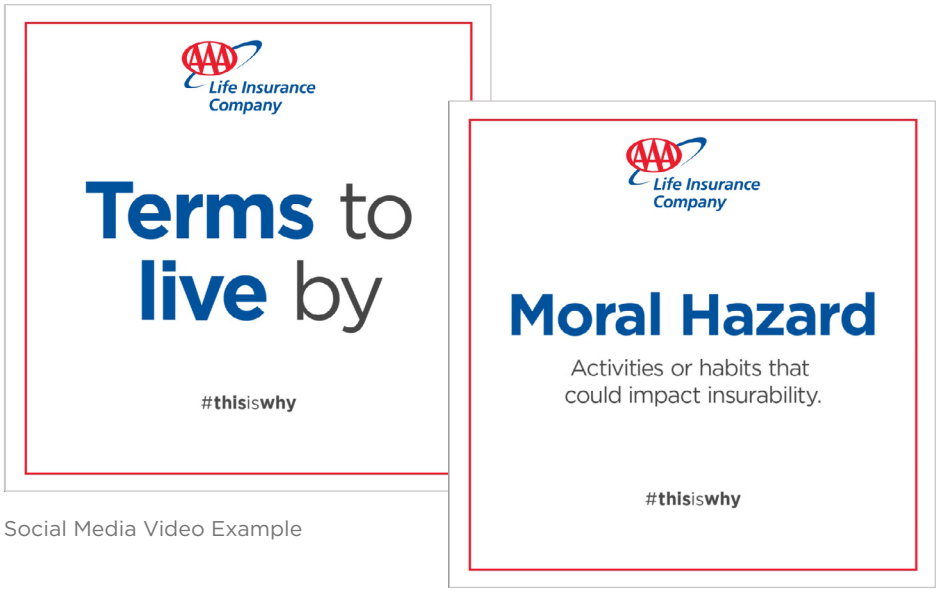

Icons should feel 2-D, like layers of cut paper. Limit sharp corners; icons should feel rounded most of the time.

Icons are built with several layers of outer strokes of varying widths. Follow these guidelines to stay consistent.

GRAPHICS + COPY COMBINATIONS

Social Media Video Example

This visual option is an excellent way to highlight copy. Since we like continuity, this visual treatment uses only a red or blue stroke on a white background.

BUTTONS + BOXES

Buttons have a 0.3961 inch corner radius and have the option of a 2px stroke. AAA Red is the primary button color.

Form field boxes have a 0.625 inch corner radius and a 1px stroke.

Buttons should stick to AAA Life's primary colors, red and blue, but also sometimes gray. Red is the primary and most often used button color. Keep in mind, the color red is often used as an error or warning state in various digital applications throughout the world - so try not use red buttons in instances where there may also be a form field - unless the intent is to be very attention grabbing. Use discretion.

If multiple buttons appear on a page, the outlined buttons (with a transparent fill) can be mixed in to help establish hierarchy and variety for different calls to action. This is a common practice in AAA Life's email campaigns.

Buttons should be pill shaped, but rectagular buttons with rounded corners are sometimes used.

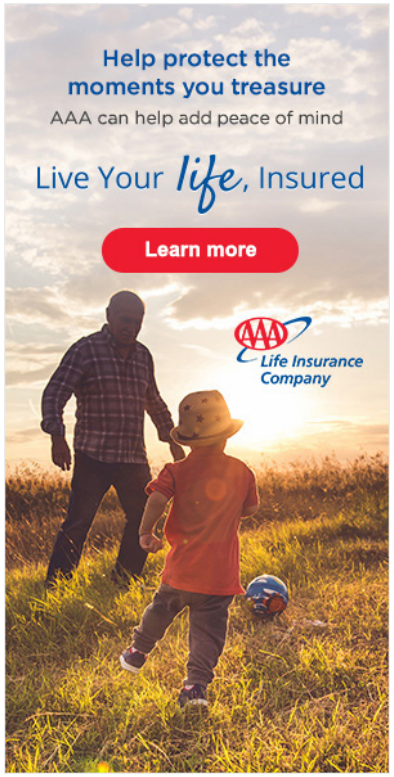

Button rollover states are slightly lighter. Button down states are slightly darker.

As far as form fields go, create forms with simple rounded corners with a 1px medium gray stroke using Open Sans or Gotham text.

DIGITAL BANNER ADS

AAA Life's digital banner ads generally lean on lifestyle photography with minimal text and a simple call to action using a button. Digital banners should feel open and airy with text that is not too small too read.

AAA Life's organic social media focuses heavily on lifestyle imagery and branded graphics to educate, entertain and engage audiences on the company's primary social media channels: Facebook, Instagram, and LinkedIn.

Organic social media includes the use of iconography and illustrations, consistent with other marketing materials, in addition to photography and videography work that supports our content pillars of Member Choice, Advice and Trust.

Formats are tailored for each unique social media channel, with a focus on distributing content in multiple ways to best reach our target audience of AAA members who do not currently have life insurance coverage through AAA Life.

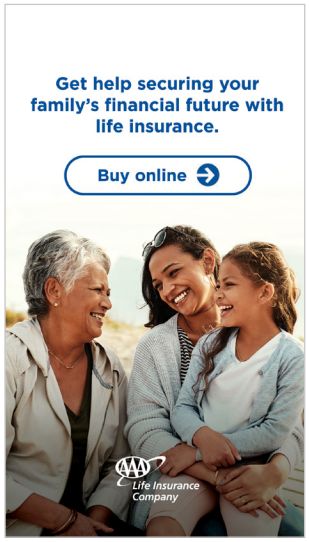

SOCIAL MEDIA: PAID

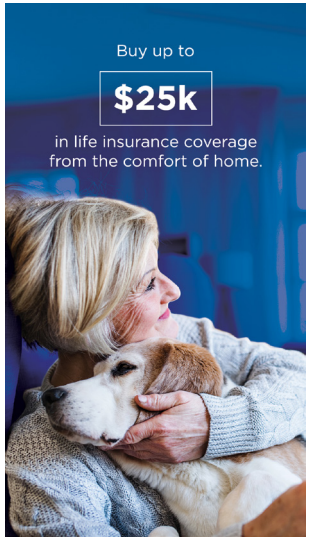

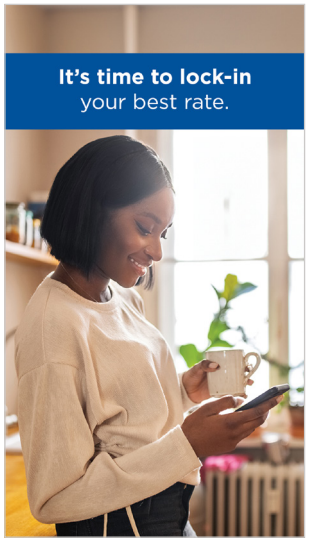

Google and Facebook

Facebook and Instagram Stories

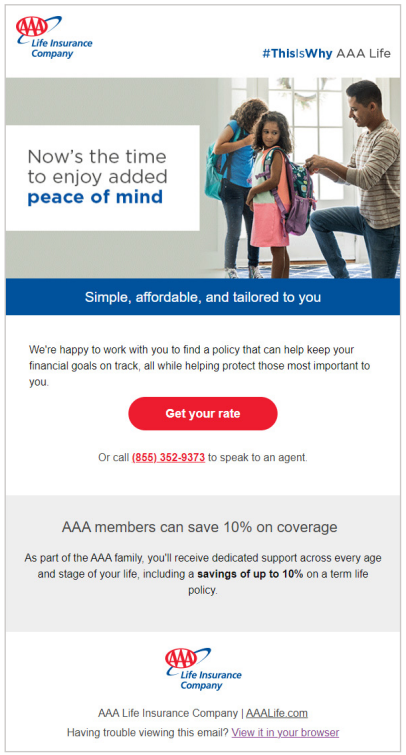

AAA Life's paid social media banner ads lean heavily into a cool color palette, often with a blue flood and the core message displayed in bold, easy to read text. Imagery is generally lifestyle focused but banners with no images are fine to use as long as the amount of copy is minimal.

EMAIL DESIGN

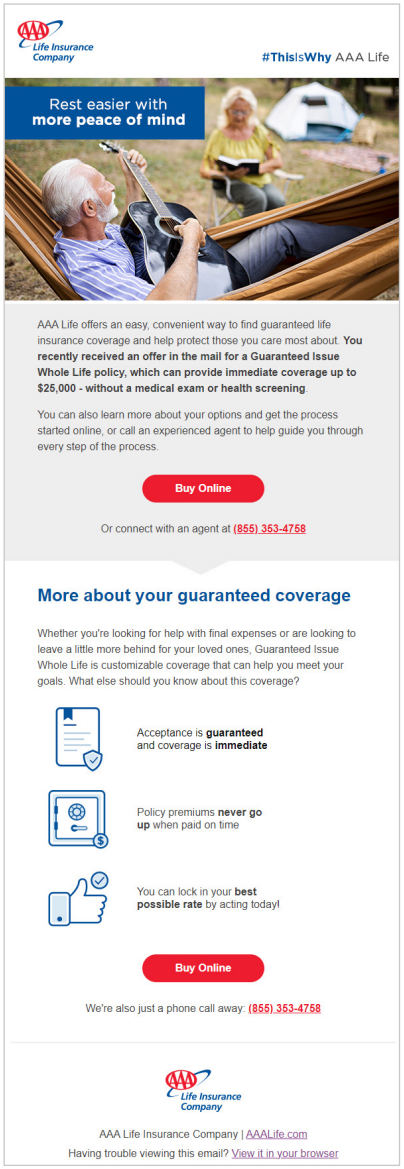

The goal of email design is to create a cohesive experience that provides the reader a clear direction. Emails should be short with content broken up into sections and a primary call to action button above the page fold.

Suggestions:

- Provide Subject Line and Preheader options.
- Pair engaging masthead copy with lifestyle imagery or a GIF.
- Use iconography or bullet points to make content more digestible.
- Only underline text that is a clickable link and make sure links are bold in blue or red.
- Footer copy should be 12pt.

Direct Term

AAA Life's direct mail print packages follow direct marketing best practices and include detailed explanations of product features and benefits. Copy that is laid out in visually appealing ways is typically the focal point of each component, while use of photography is fairly limited. Key points can be emphasized with icon art, callouts, and contrasting colors.

Direct mail uses additional font styles that are not used in AAA Life digital marketing. Creative treatments of each package are built to speak to the intended audience. Some direct mail tactics include a certificate of eligibility, benefit cards, and sticky notes. "Direct Mail Creative Guidelines" provides additional guidance.
